Residents of Isla de la Juventud integrated into Cuban civil society took to the streets for rallies, acts of reaffirmation and cantatas to demonstrate their firm adherence to the Revolution.

We will defend this security that we enjoy today tooth and nail in the streets on behalf of future generations, Lissette González Almésigas, said the first secretary of the Union of Young Communists in the special municipality.

The leader highlighted the manifest support of the locals to the call that Miguel Díaz-Canel - first secretary of the Communist Party of Cuba and president of the Republic - recently made to the revolutionaries in the face of attempts to hide national sovereignty and independence.

We reaffirm to the highest leadership of the country that as we go out to confront any stateless manifestation, we also participate in the socioeconomic transformations of the special municipality, a scenario where a comprehensive development program is materialized in the face of territorial self-sufficiency, she commented.

She stressed that if they tried to test the response capacity of Cubans in the face of such shameful provocations, once again the grateful take to the streets without hesitation to make it clear to the empire and its acolytes that Cubans are from Homeland or Death, as David did not hesitate when He faced the Philistine giant Goliath with his sling.

We are not naive, the background of these demonstrations is to aggravate the already complex epidemiological situation that Cuba is showing during these days of pandemic peak, as comrade Díaz-Canel expressed in his appearance on Monday, she said.
